

Marketing Your Work to the Lee County Library System

As a public library, the Lee County Library System selects materials whose content is produced for the general public and local interest rather than for academic use.

The library system selects materials based on positive professional reviews, patron demand and awards.

Positive reviews in one or more review journals, such as Kirkus Reviews, Publisher's Weekly, Library Journal, Booklist, School Library Journal, VOYA (Voice for Youth Advocates) or The New York Times Book Review, will give your material an excellent chance of being purchased by LCLS (and other public libraries as well). Contact information for submitting materials for professional review:

Write-ups in local newspapers, such as the News Press, Cape Coral Breeze, Lehigh Acres Citizen, Bonita Banner, Pine Island Daily News or the Naples Daily News are also useful and factor into our consideration of your work.

If you are donating material, please note that we follow the same selection guidelines for donations. If we determine that the donated material is not appropriate for the collection, we will donate the material to other agencies as appropriate. (e.g. Library Friends Group Book Sales, Goodwill or the School Foundation.)

To request that the library consider purchasing your title, please submit the purchase consideration form (last page), and a copy of the title to the LCLS Collection Development staff. Please note that a review copy is required and will not be returned regardless of the library's ultimate purchase decision.

Please remember to check the Library catalog to find out if your work has already been ordered. The catalog includes records for all materials, including those still on order. For purchase consideration requests, please remember to provide as much detail as possible:

- When/Where was the work published? Complete bibliographic data, including the date of publication/production, publisher, price, and ISBN are required.
- What is the format? Book, DVD, Music CD, Book on CD, etc. Please note that the library no longer holds audiocassette or videocassette items.
- Who is the intended audience? Adults, teens, children, parents, college students, professionals, hobbyists, etc.
- How is the material bound? Because library materials get heavy use from the public, we look for materials with sturdy bindings. Flimsy paperback covers and spiral bindings are not appropriate because they are not durable under multiple uses that library books often receive.
- Why is the material important or useful for the LCLS collection? If the item has been reviewed, please attach copies of the professional reviews.
- What is it about? Summaries should be brief, and publisher descriptions are acceptable.
- Who is the author? This should include qualifications, such as education, experience in the field, and experience as a writer/producer/performer. Be sure to mention that you are a local author, publisher, or Reading Festival Marketplace author or publisher, since this may affect our selection. While the Lee County Library System always considers local interest and authorship when making selection decisions, selectors apply the same criteria to the works of local authors as they do to other works purchased for the collection.
- How/Where can the library purchase the item? The library system prefers to purchase from wholesale vendors such as Baker & Taylor, Ingram, and Midwest Tape. If the material is only available directly from you, be sure to provide a phone number, address, and email address.

Please keep the following in mind about your submission – The library considers and orders thousands of titles each year. For this reason, the library does not notify individual sellers of the decisions made for every purchase request.

For submitting sample titles, donations for review, or supporting documentation, include a printed copy of your completed form and mail it to:
